

This eclectic bibliography represents a collection of books about and by Latinos living in the United States. Initially, I began by separating them into categories, but I soon realized that the topics of the books were interwoven into a tapestry of threads that could not be separated. The autobiographies were also classified as identity studies; the border studies were interspersed with studies of the Mexican family. Therefore, I opted to make it an inclusive bibliography, a picture of the themes that motivate my research interests as I study the Latino women in my area.
